No Broad Selection For U.S. Senator

To the Editor of
The Recorder-Gazette:

13

Before you vote, keep this in mind. Outside of the President, you vote for no other officer in the government. The rest are all appointed by the President, with the "advice" and "consent" of the Senate.

With the present Senate divided roughly 66 to 24, the President can appoint anyone to any office, regardless of their fitness for it, without hindrance.

So it is evident, in these times so dangerous to the future of the United States, a loyal Senator is needed. What chance has Massachusetts to send one?

Prof. Hughes is a Harvard man, and there are too many Harvard men in the government now. There is some truth in the joke, "How do you get to the White House?" "Go to Harvard and turn left."

Edward Kennedy - there are too many Kennedys in the government now. Brother Ted would back up brother John and brother Robert, and could even surpass brother John's record of absenteeism. In other words he would be a rubber stamp for the liberal party.

Mr. Lodge is running on the GOP ticket, but George Cabot is a member of the Council of Foreign Relations, and there are too many of them in the government now, as witness Rusk, Secretary of State; Dillon, Secretary of the Treasury; Goldberg, Secretary of Labor and justice on the Supreme Court; McNamara, Disarmament Administration; J. Lee Stevenson, Representative to the United Nations; Schlesinger, Special Asst. to the President; McCone, director of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA); William J. Mohr, Director of United States Intelligence Agency (USIA); Bundy, Special Asst. to the President for National Security Affairs. To whom does the President listen?

So, all the Massachusetts voter can do, if he votes, is to choose the man whom he thinks will be the least harmful to his country.
